Two BCPS teachers to perform in Baltimore Gamer Symphony Orchestra's free, virtual concert

Concert to feature music from video games developed or published by local companies

What: The Baltimore Gamer Symphony Orchestra – whose members include Rob Glass, a Spanish teacher at Parkville High School, and Jackie Truitt, a music teacher at Ridgely Middle School – will perform a free, virtual concert of music exclusively from video games developed in Maryland.

When: Saturday, December 11, at 3 p.m. (The concert will be pre-recorded and will be available for viewing indefinitely after its YouTube premiere.)

Where: The Baltimore Gamer Symphony Orchestra YouTube channel

Background: The free online show will feature songs from Fallout, Civilization, The Elder Scrolls, XCOM, and Kingdoms of Amalur: Reckoning. In addition, the show will feature tunes from local independent game developers.

The all-volunteer community orchestra is a program of the Turner Station Recreation Council and is based at the Sollers Point Multipurpose Center.
